Oliver Borrman, CEO, Hark Orchids LP

Companies expanding in the US are confronted with a myriad of decisions and tasks. Factors such as qualified business partners, timely customer support, industry-specific market familiarity, coordinated marketing, and staffing are crucial to conducting successful business in the US. GACC Midwest is here to support your goals throughout each step of your US market entry and expansion.

YOUR CHALLENGE

Assimilation into the US market is a complex process that presents great opportunities but also some risks. The US is approximately 27 times larger than Germany, and differences in mindset, demand, job competition, consumer trends, and sales are common. In order to minimize the risk of bad investments, proper preparation for your market entry is key. Even after initial customer acquisition, you must constantly keep up the momentum to seize new opportunities and continue growing.
